Know What’s Up? The Rate of Students Walking and Biking to School

Data results from the Cupertino Safe Routes 2 School program show that the rate of Cupertino students walking and biking to school is increasing. Whether it’s for safer streets, pollution reduction, traffic reduction, or all of the above, Cupertino students and families are realizing the role they play in traffic and the power they have to make their community healthier by walking, biking, and carpooling to school as daily practice.

Student tally data indicates that schools in our community are reducing their rates of single-family vehicle school travel to school, and increasing the number of students walking and biking since the 2015/16 school year. Sedgwick Elementary School, one of the Safe Routes 2 School pilot sites, has more than doubled its rate of students biking to and from school in the last 16 months.

Sedgwick has also improved traffic safety around its school site through a variety of staff-driven efforts. One of their most successful campaigns called “Active Bodies, Global Minds” encourages students and staff to increase their daily physical activity by rewarding them with punches on a card every time an individual walks or bikes to school or engages in physical activity during lunch or recess. Sedgwick refers to this program as “global” because a main objective of the program, besides improving safety, is to decrease carbon emissions from driving and therefore positively contribute to global health.

Other schools involved in the Cupertino Safe Routes 2 School pilot program have also begun to see reductions in traffic as a result of their active transportation encouragement on campus. Monta Vista High School and Kennedy Middle School have both seen an increasing rate of students walking and cycling to school this year, as well as reductions in their rates of family vehicle travel. Hyde Middle School has decreased its rate of single family vehicle travel to and from school and Cupertino High School boasts a 5% increase in its rate of students cycling to school. This 5% equates to 112 more students cycling to and from school every day and 112 less cars on the road every morning!

These results continue to support the idea that we as a community have the power to reduce traffic and improve safety out on our streets. Everyone has a role in making Cupertino a more enjoyable place to live and Cupertino schools are certainly asserting their role in the forefront of this effort.
Don’t Let Common Household Chemicals Become a Hazard to Your Family

There are likely many common household chemicals that have found their way into your home. And although they can be helpful in certain situations, they can be dangerous to you and your family.

In fact, the average household contains between 3 to 10 gallons of hazardous materials. Do you have cleaners, bleach, oil, paints, thinners, batteries, medicines, or pesticides in your home? All of them are classified as hazardous materials and must be treated with special care.

There are four basic types of hazardous materials: corrosive, ignitable, reactive, and toxic. Each requires their own level of cautions and care when using, storing, and disposal:

Corrosive Materials

Common household corrosive materials are metal, drain, and rust cleaners with an acid ingredient; paint thinners or removers; and oven cleaner with lye (sodium hydroxide). When using them, never put them in an unsafe container, which could melt. Use rubber gloves and eye protection as most of these materials will irritate skin and eyes.

Ignitable Materials

Ignitable materials include gasoline, kerosene, diesel fuel, ammunition, matches, paint thinner, and items containing alcohol. Most of these materials contain a warning on the container, like “Do not store near heat” or “Keep in a cool, dry place.” These types of materials have a high fire danger and may be highly explosive as well. Use only in well-ventilated areas away from heat sources. Store in a safe location where they will not get knocked over and spill.

Reactive Materials

Reactive materials are those which when exposed to air, water, or another chemical may explode or outgas toxic fumes. For example, when bleach and ammonia are mixed it creates a toxic gas. Always check labels to see what it may mix or be diluted with safely.

Toxic Materials

Toxic materials may cause serious health problems or death if ingested, absorbed into the skin, or inhaled through breathing in sufficient quantities. Extreme caution should be used with these chemicals, and following instructions carefully is a must. Protective gear is advised if there is danger of exposure to skin, eyes, or through breathing. Closets, cupboards, and garages of toxic materials could include air fresheners, carpet deodorizers, medicines, vitamins, mothballs, oven cleaners, insecticides, paint thinners.

Be sure to keep the Poison Control number (800.764.7661) handy, or program it into your cell phone and home phone if possible.

The list is endless. And notice that some chemicals fall into more than one class of hazardous materials. If you are not sure if a material is hazardous, just be safe, assume it is! Always store hazardous materials in their original container unless it is mixed for use and then label the container with a permanent marker.

Never use soft drink or similar containers for hazardous materials as a child may think it’s safe to drink. Dispose of all unused or waste hazardous chemicals properly. In Cupertino, there are all sorts of ways to get rid of hazardous waste for free. Contact Recology and tell them what type of hazardous waste you want to dispose of. They will send you bag(s) and give you an appointment for pick-up of the waste. If they do not take it, such as sharps or pharmaceuticals, they will direct you to the nearest drop-off location.

Community Emergency Response Team (CERT)

This is the perfect time to learn how to be part of the disaster response solution. This is an intensive training session by the Santa Clara County Fire Department on preparedness and helping others during a disaster. The course is offered four times a year and you will have one-year to make up any missed sessions for graduation. You may attend the final exercise once all six sessions have been completed. We encourage all Cupertino residences to attend this worthwhile training. The next class will be offered next year. Look for the schedule in coming articles.
The National Prohibition Act (the 18th amendment to the U.S. Constitution, also known as the Volstead Act) banned the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors. The Act took effect in 1920. Two years before, San Jose politicians shut down the city's 78(!) saloons. Keep in mind San Jose was a much smaller town in 1918.

However, "medicinal alcohol" dispensed by specially licensed physicians was exempt from the law. Whiskey and brandy had been widely used for centuries as a tonic or stimulation to digestion for patients of all ages. (Alcohol was even used as a "cure" for alcoholism. Go figure.) Alcohol was used to treat everything from anemia, high blood pressure, heart disease, typhoid, pneumonia, and tuberculosis.

Later medical research disputed the claims of "medicinal liquor," but still, doctors were reluctant for any type of government interference with their professional judgments regarding treatments. The consumption of "medicinal alcohol" jumped dramatically during Prohibition.

The pages of the San Jose Mercury newspaper in 1928 provide plenty of evidence as to local availability of alcohol. There were numerous stories of public drunkenness, shootouts between bootleggers (or spouses) along Monterey Road in San Jose. At 65 Post Street, one owner of a notorious "speakeasy” hid his operation behind a three-seat barbershop in the front of his building, while supplying thirsty citizens in the back.

In 1929, Northern California’s Prohibition Administrator, E.R. Bohm, allegedly complained that there were more stills in operation in Santa Clara County than in any other county in the Bay Area. The photo you see is from History San Jose (taken by John C. Gordon) of confiscated stills in front of the San Jose Courthouse.

On a less nefarious topic, November’s holiday, Thanksgiving, provides plenty of recipes that include a little bit of the "spirits" as we remember the sacrifices of those who settled America. The following recipe with yummy picture is shared for your eating pleasure.

BOURBON CHOCOLATE PECAN PIE

Recipe:
- 3 eggs
- ¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
- ¼ cup light corn syrup
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons bourbon
- 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 cup chopped pecans
- 1 cup semisweet chocolate morsels
- 1 unbaked (9-inch) pastry shell

Happy Thanksgiving, Cupertino!

Free Worm Composting Workshop – Let the worms do the work!

Don’t have space for a backyard compost bin? Exhausted by all the turning a backyard compost bin requires? Don’t fret — try worm composting!

You can build your own worm bin out of a simple plastic or wooden box. Unlike backyard composting, your bin can be small and compact and can be kept indoors or outdoors. You add the food scraps and organic material and let the worms do the work. Worms eat the food scraps and create nutrient-rich compost and you have happy, healthy plants.

To learn more about worm composting and how to get started, attend a free Worm Composting Workshop from 10 am – noon on Saturday, November 5, at McClellan Ranch Preserve, 22221 McClellan Rd. These free workshops are organized by the Santa Clara County’s Composting Education Program. Register today at ucanr.edu/compost. Learn more about worm composting by watching videos at ucanr.edu/compostingvideos.

Creating a Cleaner Creek One Piece of Trash at a Time

Who spends their Saturday morning picking up somebody else's trash? As it turns out, quite a few people!

Seventy volunteers showed up on their day off to unite as a community and create a cleaner environment. But volunteers didn’t spend the whole time knee deep in garbage. They were also treated to a special treat: a walk along the banks and flowing water of Calabazas Creek.

Why was that so special? While the creek is visible from the bridge at Creekside Park, it’s only on these planned cleanup days that people get a chance to go through the normally locked gate and get away from the busy metropolis as they experience the quiet, natural world of burbling water, slippery rocks, and overhanging trees.

While the city above disappears from view, the creek holds evidence of it at every turn in the form of stray soccer balls, beverage containers, food wrappers, broken glass, take-out containers, and much more. This event was an official part of Coastal Cleanup Day, which is celebrated around the world by people going out to the nearest body of water to pull out everything that should not be there with a goal of preventing trash from reaching the ocean.

Cupertino doesn’t have a beach. But our creeks run to the bay, which connects to the ocean, all part of an elaborate and interconnected watershed that our city is bound by law to protect from harm.

Who Were They?

Groups of children and their parents connected to Cub Scout Dens 325 and 457 turned out and were soon wading through the water and scouring the banks, trash grabbers in hand. Older students from Cupertino, Homestead, and Monta Vista High Schools appeared as well and were quickly working to free a large TV from the silt.

Members of Rolling Hills 4-H Club left their goats behind but brought a monarch butterfly to release during the event and even dug up an unusual non-native invasive plant: a giant bok choy! Fathers and sons from the Hindu Swayamsevak Sang (HSS) community service group dug up a waterlogged piece of carpet along with a bag full of other smaller items collected along the way. Prasanna Kulkarni of HSS described why this creek has particular meaning to their members, noting that since they meet regularly in Creekside Park their “volunteers feel emotionally and spiritually connected with the park and the creek that runs through Cupertino.”

What Did They Find?

Together all the volunteers honored this local waterway by pulling out a total of 27 pounds of recyclables, 5 pounds of compostable material, and 60 pounds of trash. Besides the TV set there were other unusual items: a concrete-covered wheelbarrow, part of a laptop computer, an empty suitcase, and a plastic costume battle axe.

What’s Next?

The City hosts cleanup events at Creekside Park two times per year. The next opportunity for you to make a difference will be National River Cleanup Day on the third Saturday in May 2017.

Congratulations to our “Energized by Art” Winners!

Notice a new splash of color along Stevens Creek Boulevard? As part of our “Energized by Art” Utility Box Pilot Project, six more formerly drab utility boxes have been transformed into environmental works of art, inspiring a culture of conservation among the Cupertino community.

Cupertino student artists submitted entries in response to the theme, “What can I do to conserve resources in Cupertino?” Out of over one hundred entries received, five were selected by the Fine Arts Commission to be painted on traffic controller boxes. The City partnered with local art school and Certified Green Business Hongyun Art to coordinate the painting and collection of submissions. A huge congratulations to our winning artists:

- Grades K-2: Amy Tang & Miranda Zeng
- Grades 3-5: Madison Chin
- Grades 3-5: Audrey Guo & Lawrence Yu
- Grades 6-8: Olive Tang
- Grades 9-12: Michelle Tang

Congratulations to our “Energized by Art” Utility Box Pilot Project winners!
“Energized by Art” winners will be recognized at the Tuesday, November 1 City Council meeting for their incredible artistic and environmental contribution to Cupertino.

Meanwhile, experience the artwork for yourself. Next time you’re cruising down Stevens Creek Boulevard between Stelling and Tantau, stop, admire, and get inspired! Learn more at cupertino.org/utilityboxart.

Poetry Memoir Sessions Conclude in November

The well-attended poetry memoir series, led by our own Poet Laureate Ann Muto, ends on Wednesday, November 16. Poets will walk out of this last session with their own book of poetry or at the very least a unique art book in which their poetry will find a home in the future. Poets will be invited to share one of their memoir poems with the group.

Consider attending that final extended session (10:45 am - 1 pm) even if you did not attend any of the others. You will be able to make your own book guided by local book artist Keiko O’Leary. Whether you have one poem or 16, you will still be “published.” Even if your first poem is eluding you at this moment, you will take home a unique art book, a gift for yourself or for someone special.

For more information about Keiko’s talents, check out thinkinginkpress.com/tag/keiko-oleary/.

The final memoir sessions will be held in the Story Room at the Cupertino Library. If you have not attended before, please indicate your interest by emailing poetlaureate@cupertino.org.
