California has been experiencing extreme weather patterns, with intense rain events in 2017 preceded by five years of drought. The upcoming rainy season could result in large storms, but any rain event has the potential to cause flooding to creeks, ditches, and even to neighborhood streets and homes.

As the rainy season begins, residents should make sure that they are prepared for possible flooding. Some areas in Cupertino, such as properties along Stevens Creek, are at increased risk for flooding.

The following tips will help to plan, prepare, and protect your family and home:

1. Make a family emergency plan and a three-day emergency kit
   Agree on a meeting spot and plan a safe route to higher ground. Prepare an emergency kit with tools and supplies, non-perishable food and water.

2. Download disaster and emergency apps
   Download Santa Clara County’s emergency preparedness apps “ReadySCC” and “AlertSCC” on your smartphone.

3. Know your flood risk
   Visit FloodSmart.gov or call the Cupertino Public Works Department at 408-777-3354 to check whether your house is in a FEMA designated flood zone.

4. Do you need flood insurance?
   If you live in a FEMA designated special flood hazard area, and have a federally insured mortgage, you are required to insure your property from flood hazards. For property owners who currently possess flood insurance, be sure to inventory and photograph your home’s contents and put important papers and insurance policies in a safe place. Even if you don’t live in an SFHA, you can get extra protection by purchasing flood insurance. To find a local agent, call (800) 427-4661.

5. Protect your home from flood threats
   The Santa Clara Water District offers free filled sandbags. For additional details, visit valleywater.org/floodready.

6. Keep creeks clean and flowing
   Healthy, flowing creeks reduce flood risks by carrying storm water away from homes. Report blockages and dumping in creeks to the Santa Clara County Water District at (408) 630-2378 or (888) 510-5151.

7. Avoid floodwaters
   “Turn around, don’t drown.”

8. Build responsibly in floodplains
   Construction within SFHA zones has special requirements. Physical alterations to buildings can be made to reduce risks and flood insurance premiums, such as elevating a structure. Contact the Cupertino Public Works Floodplain Manager at 408-777-3354 first to ensure compliance with special requirements.
The following services are provided by the City of Cupertino to help residents prepare for potential flooding:

- City Maintenance Yard located at 10555 Mary Avenue offers loose sand and empty bags for self-filling. Be sure to bring a shovel, just in case.

- The Public Works Department possesses elevation certificates for many buildings located in the floodplain.

- Contact the Cupertino Building Department to get a permit before you build. Check out “What You Should Know Before You Hire a Contractor,” which is available for download at csbl.ca.gov/About_Us/Library/Guides_And_Publications.

- City staff can assist with onsite flooding and drainage issues, and can provide you with practical drainage information. Call (408) 777-3354 to discuss your concerns.

- Other information on flood preparedness is available on the Cupertino website at cupertino.org/emergency, and on the Santa Clara Valley Water District Website at valleywater.org/floodready.

How we can work together to protect Cupertino from flooding

The City's storm drainage system is composed of street gutters, storm drain inlets, and pipes that connect the inlets to local creeks. This system drains street runoff into the creeks and channels on the valley floor.

Residents can assist the City and help protect immediate neighborhoods from localized flooding by sweeping gutters regularly, placing swept material in the garbage, and checking that nearby storm drain grates are not covered with leaves or litter. Residents should abide by street sweeping/no parking signs to allow the City to keep the gutters clean and the storm drain system flowing.

In the fall, before the rains start, City maintenance crews vacuum out City storm drain inlets, and check for any evidence of hazardous materials in the drains. This cleaning prevents any illegally dumped materials that may be sitting in the inlets from washing into our creeks with the first rains.

It is illegal to dump anything into a creek or a storm drain. Residents can report dumping incidents to the City by calling (408) 777-3269 during business hours or 911 after hours and on weekends.

Please notify the City if you observe excess debris and trash in streams and ditches at (408) 777-3354 or cupertino.org/environmental. Requests for service can be submitted at cupertino.org/cupertino311.
With the fate of Cupertino’s future in their hands, hundreds of citizens lined up on September 27, 1955 to vote on an issue that would change their lives—incorporation, and granting cityhood to Cupertino. The journey to independent cityhood was an uphill battle, but one that many citizens believed was worth the fight. With taxes, schools, farmland, local culture, and the impending growth of nearby cities all on the line, Cupertino stood up for itself with the cast of a ballot.

The movement for incorporation started in 1954, spearheaded by two organizations, the Cupertino-Monta Vista Improvement Association and Fact Finding Committee. In July 1954, the Fact Finding Committee raised funds to hire experts from the Coro Foundation in San Francisco for advice on Cupertino’s future. They highly recommended incorporation, and provided materials for getting incorporation petitions written and circulated.

The Cupertino-Monta Vista Improvement Association focused on education and gathering petition signatures. Notable member Norman J. Nathanson took the issue almost entirely into his own hands. He set up headquarters in the basement of the Cupertino Post Office and held public panels in the schoolhouses to educate residents on the issue.

But why did Nathanson and the Cupertino-Monta Vista Improvement Association find incorporation so necessary? For a wide array of reasons, ranging from taxes and land, to their own sense of Cupertinian pride. First, Nathanson, like many other residents, was a farmer. For farmers, a main concern was losing their farmland, primarily from other industries using the land for manufacturing, and poor planning turning the area into a “shabby suburb,” as Nathanson once said.

The population boom of the post-war 1940s caused seemingly instantaneous growth in Cupertino, and because of this, the need for a plan became urgent. Cupertinians had to find a way to plan for the future so that the citizens could participate in the system controlling the issues that directly affected them.

Arguably, the greatest concern for Cupertino citizens was the annexation of their territories. Neighboring cities like San Jose, Sunnyvale, and Los Altos were rapidly growing over a period of a few years, and Cupertino residents did not want to have their community split apart. “Those cities that want to annex [Cupertino] would like to take it piece by piece,” Nathanson said. He argued that annexation would divide the community, which took pride in its agricultural achievements, its heritage, and the spirit of hard work.

The Improvement Association continued their work by gathering signatures for petitions. By the spring of 1955, they gathered the necessary signatures, and sent it to the County Board of Supervisors for approval to put the issue on the next ballot. The election took place with a 75% turnout of eligible voters, and Cupertino voted for incorporation 225 to 183, officially becoming the county’s thirteenth city (recognized on October 10, 1955). Residents also appointed Cupertino’s first city council, Ralph Lindenmeyer, Warner Wilson, John Saich, R. Ivan Meyerholz, and of course, Norman Nathanson himself. Nathanson, it turns out, barely won his seat, receiving just six votes more than his opponent.
